

6 TIPS

GETTING THE MOST FROM INNOVATION IN A REINVENTED WORLD

Innovating in the new world of business means self-disruption—the ability for leaders and professionals to act on and assume ownership for introducing change in the workplace, within their careers, and beyond their own spheres of influence (Chapters 1 & 6).

1. WHAT NEEDS TO CHANGE

Innovating within complex environments requires cognitive skills and higher mental processes such as perception and intuition. Are you looking to reinvent your organization, yourself or both? (Introduction & Chapter 14)

2. I.D. YOUR PRIORITIES

Leaders capable of building and sustaining relationship ecosystems that extend their company's influential reach will differentiate themselves in the new world of business. (Chapters 1 & 10)

3. COLLECT YOUR DATA

There is no one size fits all for reinventing an organization—begin where you are today, determine where your business needs to be, and how fast you need to get there. This becomes your reinvention strategy. (Chapter 13)

4. REVIEW CHAPTER TAKEAWAYS

In Part 2 of IIRW we group key takeaways at the end of each chapter representative of the 10 Essential Elements. Find correlations and draw conclusions wherever you can. These findings will form your key takeaways.

5. CONNECT THE DOTS

Connecting the dots in the new world of business requires successfully utilizing large data and social networks to assure risktaking is responsible and innovation occurs naturally and systematically. (Chapters 10 & 13)

6. DEVELOP YOUR ACTION PLAN

Getting the job done responsibly and credibly in the new world of business means showing up like you mean it—engaged in bold decisions using new business models. (Chapter 11)

In celebration of IIRW's publication anniversary, we're offering readers a complimentary subscription to our Seeding Change membership site. USE CODE IIRW2018 at checkout to receive two months free access to our on-demand interactive courses and live Q&A calls.

Sign-ups are good through 11/30/18.